Rules create changes at ACHS

By LaDELL WRIGHT

This year a lot of changes are being made at ACHS and other schools throughout Virginia and the rest of the country. These changes will affect the number of assemblies, field trips, and pep-rallies this year and in the future years, graduation requirements will also be affected.

These laws are results of proposals from the Commission on Excellence in Education. The Commission is trying to improve the quality of education in the United States after reports that U. S. schools were falling behind those of Eastern Europe and Japan.

A major objective of the Commission is to keep the amount of time students spend in the classroom to a maximum and the interruptions of that time to a minimum.

As the school year continues, students will notice the fewer number of school assemblies. Although some assemblies will be offered, they will be carefully evaluated before they are approved.

Field trips will be one of the areas hit hardest in ACHS by the proposals. This year, most field trips have to be confined to the class period of the class taking the trip. This means that if a first period class schedules a trip, they would have to return to school before the start of second period.

Most students will probably miss Friday afternoon pep-rallies. Pep-rallies, which, at one time, were held as often as six times a year, have been cut to just two this school year. There will be one pep-rally during football season and a second during boys' basketball season.

Many underclassmen and pre-high school students should be interested to learn that, in upcoming years, extra science and math courses will have to be taken in order to graduate.

Other class-time interrupters are currently being studied and evaluated. These include announcements, early dismissals, club days, and fund-raising projects.

According to Principal Donald Armentrout, the changes are just beginning for several schools although some have been standard procedures at ACHS.

Though the Appomattox School System is trying to raise the quality of education in the county, it is doubtful that any days will be added to the school year. Says Armentrout, "we'll try to make the best of 180 days."

A RECORD CROWD turned out for the 11th annual Concord Rescue Squad auction and rummage fundraiser Saturday. The squad is seeking to raise $25,000 this year, part of which will be used for replacing an ambulance. The Holstein calf which this little girl is so interested in was donated for auction by Doug Perrow. (Photo by Jeff Spitzer)
